HONGRONG, AUGUST 16TH. 1870.

"THE cortege was received by His Excellency CHUN How "- such me the words of the Northern papers concerning the funeral the Sisters and the French Consul Tientsin. When one reads such a statement as this, one almost begins to doubt ond's own existence. Was the whole story of the Tientsin Massacre, told in detail count force, that it was to Chus How's scanwas to be attributed, only a hideous dream? Aro we now awaking to discover that wo have but passed through a terrible nightmare; that the Sisters have met their death through an accident, for which the chief official at Tientain was in no wise responsible : . that Mr. FONTANIER never protested against CHEN How's refusal to take any steps; that was never attacked in the Consulate and on his way to Chun How's vamen and Britain at a crisis like the present, observes that he was not killed on his way back? Surely we must be greatly mistaken. CHUN How has been grievously maligned. So far from his having shown any cumity towards us be bas all along been our friend. He has done nothing more than charge is not so very severe after all. Varied was a large remain of French gentlemen at the sit by with his hands before him, while he learning and copious flow of language may knew that the plot for murdering the Freuch Consul and the Sisters of Charity was being matured; and; as was only catural, he did | wrongful advocacy. For example, the Cycle not deem the mere fact that twenty or so has a certain amount of varied, if rather foreigners, ten of whom were only women, heavy, learning, and a flow of language which, were destined to a foul death, any reason for if not nervous and limpid, is at all events his running the slightest risk of incurring and if its articles were written in better Engthe displeasure of those who were the ring- lish, it would no doubt do the more barin leaders in the affair. The French Charge pliments on His Excellency, and express their full belief that his presence betokens a desire | war, mid that by latest advices from Tientim Kung to punish the offenders. Can such words be looked upon otherwise than a bitter, but, under the circumstances, a cruel satire? Would not FORTANIER rather bave been left unhonoured in the river, into which he had been thrown, than be baried with the greatest pomp and magnificence, with Chun How complimented by the French Charge d'Affaires over his grave? It must have been very difficult for Mons. de Rochs-CHOUART to give utterance to the words which came from his mouth. Could be believe that CHUN How's presence at the funeral betokened any more that the massacre would be avenged, then his presence in the city with a body of disciplined soldiers who could at once have put down the riot had betekened that it would be prevented precise opposite of what the Charge d'Affaires Ames Saunders and James Trainer. In the present case. Tseno-awo-rane who is generally believed to be at the bottom of the whole plot, was sent down to Tientsin to arrange the affair; and it is not very surprising that he soon declares the task to be beyond his capacity; while Chung How, who is at once held by the Pskin Authorities to be the person immediately, responsible for the outrage, contrives to talk over the outraged his presence, the funeral of his victims.

Such is the upshot of our endeavours to ettle matters of this kind by negotiation with the Chinese. It is needless to reapitulate all the circumstances which go to prove Chung How's complicity in the affair. In the face of the last news hardly anyone can have the heart to do so. It is surely uscless to urge the strongest facts, when we have placed ourselves in the position of asking criminals to punish themselves. We are obtaining such justice as we may expect when guilty of such folly; and we had better think no more of the letter of the Protestant Missionaries to Mr. Lav, the testimony of dozens of credible witnesses,-the limudred other circumstances that prove the cultiability of CHUNG How, and the strong grounds for suspicion against Tours Kwo FAN. Let us forget all this and trust to these Excellencies to do us justice. There dalous neglect to take any steps to put down is only one consideration which may make Hongkong seeking employment, he had is rectors, there remain for appropriation with which the fish, though of course only as an interested should pursue with regard to a certain case us besitate. ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY, WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION. ANGLO-CHINESE DICTIONARY, by the Rev. W. LOBSCHEID, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

MOR scope and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extense. Each and every word in CARBINES. fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hithorto attained. The typo-graphy displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond LANE, CRAWFORD & Co. in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast concern of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. The scope of the work is so great, and ite utilitarian purposes so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans, residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully, with which very few in-dred of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasionally. It comprises upwards of two thousand large

BARON RICHTOFEN'S LEFTER ("/Continued.) The practical importance of the locas is based on some of its prominent properties. In the Chira had a more favourable plimate, it would rank naming the most productive countries in the world, on account of the general distributinn of the locus. It is very probable that it did rout bigh in this respect, in parly historic times when the mountains were wooded and kept the climate moist. The entire surface of the loca is at present under cultivation. But hwing to its property of being easily percolated by water, it needs more frequent and prolonged rains than most other kinds of soil, and if rain fails in time of sowing, then the tilled ground will be carried away by the winds, the sords exposed to the sun and not germinate at all. I travelled for days through regions where such bud been the case this year, and the otherwise fertite country had an extremely arid aspect. Another important property is the tendency to vertical cleaving. It creates the conditions for chesp dwellings, of which a large proportion of the population avail themselves. To it, too, is due the rapid progress of deundation. The rivers which carry away the loss separate it into its constituent parts, viz. the sand, the loam, and the carbonate of lime. The latter is probably carried in solution into the sen, while the very fine sand and the loam are separately redeposited, creating, here an arid, and there, a Houses, Lands, Cenements, &c. fertility which exceeds that of the loess itself. The sandy regions prevail where the rivers emorge from the mountains, while the rich alluvial loam is curried to the lower country. - It would be of interest to have a geological map of the great plain, with the formations of losse, sand, and alluvial loam marked separately. 8.—Region of Hwaikingfu. The northern bank of the Yellow River is flat, and in this region not protected by embunkments, because the land rises slowly towards the north. After crossing a belt of fine sand, resulting from the deposition of the sandy component of the loese,

Numerous streams of clear water descend from the Tat Hang Shan, and the inhabitants make the amplest use of them for irrigation The density of the population surpusses bolief I do not recollect to have seen a more thickly settled region in China. In consequence, the extraordinary produce of the fields is but little more than sufficient to nourish its own growers. and the quantity of grain exported is small in proportion to what is taked. The city of Hwai King Fu is large, but not the seat of much trade. It is far surpassed, in bis respect, by the mart of Ching Wha Chin S5 li nertheast, which is the great depot for the cool from the neighbouring mines, for iron and coal from Tse Chan Fu in Shansi. for the raried produce of the plain, and for all goods imported from Tientain vih Tankou- The town is exceedingly populous, and, to all appearance, a very large amount of small and marking the extent of ordinary innundation, another kind of sail is renched which is a sandy loam of moderate fertility. Then follows the region of Hwaikingto and Chiugwha, which is one of the most beautiful spots in the plains of China, It is a perfect garden, rendered park like by numerous plantations of trees and shrubs, among which thick hosquets of bamboo contrast with gloomy groves of cypress. The picturesque outlines of the neighbouring Tai-four wheeled and two-wheeled carts, wheelharrows, coolies and pack animals, when I passed through it. Whent and barley are the staples of the agrioultural produce of this plain. Both are sown in November and harvested in June. The second crop consists chiefly of millet. Neither cotton nor poppy are planted; and tobacco is raised only in small quantity. Besides grain and flour, the exports from Ching Wha consist of anthracite, iron castings, wrought iron, pig iron, pottery, bamboo ware, and fruit. Two other articles of export are peculiar to Hwai King Fo. One consists in steel ware, such as ruzors, soissors, knives, &c., for the manufacture of which Hwai King Fu is celebrated; the steel is imported from Wu Hu and Hankow. The other is a coatly medical root, by the name of Ti-hwang, which does not thrive in any other place in China, and is therefore exported in all directions of the compass. This Ti-bwang and quite different from tai bwang or Thubarb It is sold at 850 cash per cattie, and the total

The trade of Chingwha takes various directions. There is a lively intercourse with a small shipping place on the Yellow River, at the distance of 70 li. whither nothracite, iron, and pottery are carried, to be shipped : 1st down the river, to Tienliangohing and Lungmenkou, whence they are distributed by land east and south, as we are informed by Mr. Elias; 2nd scross the river to Sa shinhien, and then by land to Milien, Juchau, and Lushauhien; and 3rd, up the river to Mangteinbien, Honanfu and the western country. Tobacco from linpe, homp and cotton go in return from the south to Chingwhe. The most important trade roads are eastward to Sinwubien and Tankowobin, and northward and northwestward to Shansi In regard to the latter, I will say a few words premises and Mesers. GIBB, LIVINGSTON & when trenting on that province. Tankon takes a great portion of the mineral and metallurgical riduce of Shansi, besides grain from Hwaikingfu, and sends, in return, the imports which it receives from Tientsin. The ratio in which foreign goods are represented among these is surprisingly emult.
